We expect our Suppliers to conduct their business in accordance with the highest ethical standards.

To support Canadian operations, Republic Services maintains a supply chain primarily focused on procuring goods and services from Suppliers in Canada and the United States. The company actively works to identify, assess, and monitor potential risks related to modern slavery, human trafficking, and child labour within its supply chain, demonstrating its dedication to ethical business practices and corporate responsibility.

Steps Taken to Prevent and Reduce the Risk of Forced Labour and Child Labour

Republic Services has a zero-tolerance approach to modern slavery in our organization and our supply chain. We prohibit the use of all forms of forced labour and any form of human trafficking. We further prohibit the hiring of individuals that are under 18 years of age. As part of our contracting processes with Suppliers, we include in our Supplier Code of Conduct, a specific prohibition against the use of forced labour, child labour, corporal punishment, and any form of human trafficking. Suppliers also must pay workers in accordance with applicable wage and remuneration laws, including minimum wages, overtime hours and mandated benefits in any jurisdiction where they operate.

Republic Services has established frameworks to ensure that we prevent and reduce the risk of forced and child labour. We have outlined key frameworks below that support this commitment.

Policy Framework:

We have a robust policy framework that explicitly prohibits forced and child labour within our operations and supply chains. It is Republic Services' policy to comply with all laws, rules, and regulations applicable to it and its operations. We require our employees and Suppliers to adhere to our standards and policies, which are created in compliance with applicable laws, rules, and regulations. Below we have included our policies relevant to forced and child labour. Each of these also include how to report suspected illegal or other improper conduct.

- Code of Business Ethics and Conduct
- Supplier Code of Conduct
- Human Rights Policy

We also have internal Procurement policies that establish our expectations related to the procurement of goods and services. These policies guide employees to achieve appropriate sourcing of Suppliers.

Due Diligence Process:

- Our due diligence procedures involve regular assessments of Suppliers to ensure compliance with our standards. We also monitor our Suppliers and take appropriate action if misconduct is found. Suppliers receive a copy of our Human Rights Policy and our Supplier Code of Conduct to ensure these expectations and standards are communicated.
- Republic Services has a third-party risk management (“TPRM”) program that involves multiple stakeholders to ensure comprehensive oversight and risk mitigation. Key stakeholders include Risk Management, Business Continuity, Legal, Procurement, Cybersecurity, business owners, and the Ethics & Compliance function. Together, these stakeholders ensure a comprehensive approach to managing risks associated with third-party relationships, including the assessment of forced labour and child labour risks among other human rights.

Training Program:

We conduct training sessions for all employees, including annual training on our Code of Business Ethics and Conduct. Our training program focuses on key issues and promoting ethical practices.

AWARE Line

We strive to maintain an ethical culture in which employees, Suppliers, and other third parties can report concerns without fear of retaliation. This includes raising concerns about potential violations of our Code of Business Ethics and Conduct and related policies, including our Human Rights Policy. Through an independent third party, Republic Services provides an anonymous and confidential Aware Line. This hotline receives reports through a toll-free number and website, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Any concerns are addressed using a robust internal process whereby we investigate, respond and take appropriate corrective actions if warranted. We do not permit retaliation or intimidation against anyone who reports a concern, raises a compliance question, seeks advice or cooperates in an investigation. Anyone who retaliates or attempts to retaliate will be subject to disciplinary action, up to and including termination of employment. We are committed to monitoring human rights impacts, remedying any negative impacts we identify, and reporting them to relevant internal and external stakeholders, as appropriate. We update our policies and practices based on any improvement opportunities identified by this monitoring. Our Code of Business Ethics and Conduct, Supplier Code of Conduct, and Human Rights Policy each contain reporting instructions, as does our website and internal communications and posters.

Measuring Effectiveness

We use multiple performance indicators to measure the effectiveness of our policies, due diligence, and training program. We regularly review our policies to ensure they are effective. We also review questions and feedback we receive to identify if our policies need to be clarified, simplified, or improved upon. We track and report on the number of cases reported and resolved through our investigation process. To date, we have not had any findings of forced or child labour.
